Good Times!

Why be Normal?

MAD

Campus life was quite different from that of previous years under the terms of the New Deal New Rule and new times yielded changes in socializing, homework, extra curricular activities, students were not allowed to miss class without a priority one reason. After school, the homework policy jogged a student's mind. Earlier arrival meant less time to complete forgotten homework. Life for the student was deemed nothing more than work and more work! This was all part of the deal to exchange a better learning atmosphere.

Pupils did gather after school, however, as meetings, practices and any additional school preparations were to be held during a respectable hour of the day. The panorama which included the football team, the basketball team, cheerleaders, and the drama was reminder of student involvement. Sometimes, this meant more time at school than at home, and life was filled with more pressure, necessity facilitated the need for the change, and students adjusted accordingly, although grudgingly. They realized it was possible to improve the quality of life under all types of adverse circumstances. Thus, calendars and watches were evident everywhere as students sought to make good.

The New Deal STUDENT LIFE

Organizations

1985-1986 Pre-College Judicial Programs
Trainees

Since our respective assignments to the Pre-College Judicial Programs, we have become increasingly concerned about the wide range of disciplinary practices at MSSD with reference to the rights of students and healthy relations between school and student. The lack of understanding on the part of some students as to their responsibilities in the school community and in society at large is of equal concern.
